Our Final Terrene Edition

As the world of Terrene begins to die, the inhabitants again find themselves fleeing the darkness in the sky to seek life on a new world.

As the demon horde was released in the Mineral Islands it took a very short time for them to invite their friends. And as it would happen, the Vault of the Shadow was opened and the call for the Evil Sky God Rama was made.

The gods in their mercy sent their angels to open portals to other worlds. Depending on who you were in this world would determine the world you would go to. Michael and the other Arch Angels made sure of that.

As I watch those fleeing this world it strikes me as odd that it seems that somehow, someone must have been fighting to thwart this fate and they must have failed. I wonder how they died? It seems unconscionable that they would have shirked such a huge responsibility.

As the people of Terrene exit through the portals, I can clearly see a darkness, moving through the heavens. Small at first but getting larger. Rama, the destroyer of worlds. Why now?

As I watch I see him, (not sure Rama has a gender) begin to carve out chunks of the world. Huge parts just fall away. Many huge pieces miss other worlds and fall to the Sea of Glass below. This will give those that live their more material for which to build an even larger palace.

One new world, Aviron, is a wonderful world. Those there watch the chunks of their world fall and pass near their new world. It takes over an hour of falling to hear the collision with the Sea of glass below.

Aviron

The world of Aviron is a wonderful world with only the scant endings of a long-dead civilization. This world is smaller than Terrene but is similar in many ways. Aviron was an old outpost from the wars between the goods and the underworld. They have left behind strange creatures and lost treasures to be sure.

New and Old!

Some people use names to name areas they are familiar with. Others start anew. The four continents are the Fertile Lands, Amaria, Regnum Eon, and Lands of Magic. There is one island right in the middle already named Tiara. So, this reporter can still have a place to call home. I can't wait to see what awaits.

The new inhabitants are scattered across four continents bringing wagons filled with what they need. There is already building going on, so someone had the foresight to have this world already underway. Some more common races on this world are the halflings, centaurs and the Cimmerian Elves.

Apparently, there must be portals on the oceans, as there is already ship here.

Lost

Most of the Big Island of the Mineral Islands perished. Over a million died. Most likely another million elsewhere for various reasons. Leaving only three million to inhabit this new world.

Good Luck to us all.
